Dance the night away supporting the land trust

JENN WATT
County Life Editor

The Haliburton Highlands Land Trust is hoping to raise $10,000 on Friday at their annual fundraiser, Rock Our World, an evening filled with music, food and merrymaking.

Money goes to the charity's work in preserving five properties in Haliburton County: Barnum Creek Nature Reserve, Fred and Pearl Barry Wetland Reserve, Dahl Forest, Norah's Island, and Smith Forest.

Local musicians Nick and Benton will open the evening, followed by Jamie Williams Entertainment.

"[Jamie Williams] does a lot in this area," Martha Larsen, events co-ordinator for the land trust, said. "He plays 15 instruments. … Any event I've been to that he's done he gets everybody up dancing all night long, which is fun."

Rock Our World will be held at the Haliburton Legion on Friday, Aug. 9 starting at 6:30 p.m. and running until 11:30. Live auction items include Raptors and Maple Leafs tickets, which include a stay at the Victoria Hotel, as well as a locally crafted bench and jewelry. Sixty silent auction items will also be up for grabs. Appetizers and sandwiches will be served later in the evening and there's a cash bar. The event is for those 19 and older.

Capacity for the dance is 150 and as of press time, 132 tickets had been sold.

"I'm on Gull Lake and we have a bus of 30 people coming," Larsen said. "We're hoping it's an event where people get to learn more about the land trust and what it does as well as have fun doing it."

A team of five volunteers has been working in earnest since April planning the fundraiser with the last week being almost non-stop organizing. Larsen said she hopes people will mark their calendars for Rock Our World and start their weekend by supporting the land trust and its work.

Tickets are $35 and can be purchased at Up River Trading Company in both Minden and Haliburton – cash only. You can also pick them up at the land trust office, but call ahead to be sure they're open: 705-457-3700. Tickets can also be purchased online: haliburtonlandtrust.ca.

Amanda Rheaume brings Americana-style fun to Forest Festival

SUE TIFFIN

County Life Staff

Some years have passed since Amanda Rheaume last visited Haliburton when she was a child, but on Aug.18 she'll be returning for an afternoon in Haliburton Forest at the Historic Logging Museum as part of the annual Forest Festival concert series.

The award-winning musician is rehearsing in a studio in Toronto when she speaks to County Life, "running some tunes," she said, and preparing for upcoming shows that include the Forest Festival.

"The most exciting thing was that I have not gone back to Haliburton since I was a kid," she said. "I was maybe eight or 10, we would rent a cottage up, somewhere in Haliburton, and it was always so beautiful, I have all these family photos of being on the lake up there, and so I haven't been to that part of Ontario since that time. I'm just so excited to be up in nature and be up in that area."

Rheaume lived in Ottawa for 34 years before moving to Toronto in 2017, where she said she wanted to "keep moving forward."

"I've been on the road and touring so much for the last seven or eight years, I just thought, when I came home to Ottawa ... I would come home and I needed a change," she said. "I just wanted to challenge myself a little more instead of being so familiar and comfortable."

She was not a singing kid, she said, through she grew up playing piano and guitar. She only started singing as a teenager "because someone had to sing," she laughed, and came to eventually love doing so, having recently released her fifth album featuring her Americana-style.

"I really think that music is a way to deliver a message, whatever that is, it could be about uncovering a truth or it could be about celebration or connecting human beings," she said. "I love being on stage and singing and playing and it's my kind of intention to move people in whatever way, whether it's toward each other or themselves or toward a good feeling, so I just love being on stage in front of people, celebrating and creating space."

Besides touring through Canada and Europe, Rheaume has visited unique places to share song.

She visited Afghanistan three times, beginning in 2007, when she went to Kandahar Air Field with Glass Tiger to play for the troops. She next went on Canada Day 2009 when a lot of troops were being sent home, which she said made for a special experience. Then she returned to Kabul at Christmas.

"So that was really special and it really changed the path I was on just in terms of what music means and how music can affect people or help people, and all those things," she said. "It was really a good thing to do for me as an artist."

Rheaume has also visited Attawapiskat, with her friend's organization called Darkspark.

"They run an arts education program where it's basically empowerment through song," she said. "There's a teaching of colonial history and shedding light on what really happened here in this country to youth, and essentially writing songs with them about their feelings about that or themselves or their own lives. That work is so special."

As an artist and a person, Rheaume is involved in contributing to help others.

"It's important, I think we have a responsibility as humans to do things for each other and for ourselves and for the collective," she said. "I think if you're able-bodied and can help someone in some way, it's a really good thing to do."

Rheaume said her Forest Festival performance will be a full band show, a fun concert that engages the audience.

"Even just the drive up there and getting into town and getting to be there all day is going to be amazing," she said.

Besides Rheaume, this year's concert series features performances including Steven Page, the Slocan Ramblers, The Satallites, Collette Savard and the Savants, Soul Stew, and Tom Allen's Exosphere. It takes place from Aug. 14 to 18.

Tickets to Amanda Rheaume's show on Sunday, Aug. 18 at 1 p.m. the Historic Logging Museum in Haliburton Forest are $25 plus HST and are available at www.theforestfestival.com.

This week in the Highlands: agricultural fair, music festivals, history comes to life

THE HALIBURTON HIGHLANDS will be bustling this coming week with some of the year's biggest events.

While it might not be possible to attend all of the happenings, if you plan your schedule right, you can probably catch many of them.

(A caveat here: while I've done my best to get all the hours and dates right, event times change, things get cancelled and typos happen. Check before you head out to avoid disappointment.)

Editor

Top 10 reasons why we are not rock stars

THESE DAYS, it is not uncommon to hear someone referring to another person as a rock star. Apparently, all you need to do is be competent to be called one. The truth is very few of us are actual rock stars. Here are the top 10 reasons why:

1. No one wants a lead kazoo player.
2. Despite what everyone says, we don't need more cow bell.
3. There is only so much hair product to go around.
4. It's your socks and sandals.
5. You have to be really good at trashing hotel rooms.
6. Groupies have standards too.
7. You have to be able to remember the lyrics.
8. Someone has to be in cover bands.
9. Face it. You're almost 60.
10. Blame it on that time you auditioned with a five-minute oboe solo.

Intimations on mortality

(nod to W. Wordsworth)

Behold those ancient rules of sun
Obliging us to balance work with glee
That big warm clock of gold re-run
Which feels all day like endless spree
Till eyes are wide enough to see
That night itself won't be outdone
Just now, in this third part of living
My undercarriage hope sustains
But north of that grows sadness, giving Me over to less stalwart brains
More tiredness when day's refrains
Push at me cruel heartaches for sieving

Yes, daisies billow, orb spiders weave
No other greens can match this season's hues
As hopeful from my cottage I take leave
To search the forest for fine news
Along its highway shoulder I muse
But there I spot soon what has me grieve...
Each young summer, ritual repeats
When ponds swell deep and turtles fill with eggs
O'er hot striped tar, those cold heartbeats
Claw over claw on bent brave legs
All Nature's prayer for safety begs
The terrapin, its mission to complete

We stop our own car when we travel
To urge a hissing snapper through
The peril between pond and gravel
Most times she makes it, nest brand new Sending roadside stones askew
Trusting Nature yet again to unravel
Her inborn drive to lumber afterwards astray
From sandy nest back to her water
But under speedy tires, crushed today
She won't know any son or daughter Quirks of timing suddenly caught her
And from her fractured shell I look away

A monthly feature of local creative writers' work

The necessity of ecosystems

We were reminded about ecosystems yesterday morning by a moth, a waved sphinx moth, who was on the screen door at the back of the house. I had left the security light on the night before and it attracted moths and other flying creatures to the light.

This one was not leaving and hung on while we went in and out of the screen door doing various things. It was very hot and in the morning that screen was in full sun. It was over 100F on the deck thermometer.

We had tea and coffee and talked about it. We both took photos of it and were worried about it staying there in such heat.

Finally Ellen suggested moving it with a piece of paper. It had moved to the side of the door, but was still in the sun so I slid a large piece of white paper under her feet and finally she let go of the screen and grabbed onto the edge of the paper.

I took her down the stairs and propped the paper up in my potting area out of the sun. She didn't move all day and I wondered if she was all right. Andie suggested she might need a drink so I dropped a few drops of water in front of her and laid the paper down flat on the table. I went back many times as I was watering, weeding etc. But she didn't move and still had hold of the edge of the paper. I began to wonder if she was dead.

I wondered what she ate, who would eat her if she was helpless and of course the whole idea of being part of our ecosystem.

I feel that in general the human race is unaware of the fact that we are all part of the whole and what we do impacts every creature on this planet and each other. I so wanted this moth to survive because it too is part of the whole and because I was the one who had upset her life by leaving the light on.

We talked about how everything is related and the food chain is not just a saying but a real part of how ecosystems work. We took more photos and again wondered what her life was like. Did she eat other insects or plants? Did she usually fly at night? Why was she attracted to the light? Just one cog in the ecosystem that makes up her life and yet we were fascinated by what we had seen and how she had reacted.

The first thing I did this morning was to go down to the potting shed and she was gone. No sign of a struggle, just the mark on the paper where I had poured a bit of water. I came back up to tell the good news that as far as I could tell she was alive and had flown away.

This incident made me think of how our planet is in trouble and how our lack of caring and knowledge has allowed human beings to overpopulate, pollute, and use too many resources for the ecosystem to survive. We as a species are more interested in the bottom line than we are in our fellow humans or the other species of creatures and plants that inhabit earth. I wonder how many people would take this small story seriously? Unfortunately I believe that most of the billions of people on this earth are either too greedy to care or are scraping to survive and thus have no time or energy to understand what is happening to our environment. I just hope that the young people will make us stop and listen to what we must do to survive!

Flock

Stream of geese, gliding, silent as light, along a strip of Lake, their feathers brushing ripples of Sun,
their leader steering them
towards the dock,
that rocks beneath the willow,
tethered by a rope to its trunk.
I lope along the fringe of the path,
towards my favourite spot,
pausing to watch the procession of geese,
unfurling beneath Sky, seared
blue by Sun.
How placidly, the flock flows, in such a straight line,
all thirty-three of them, like vertebrae
on a spine,
past the colonies of lily-pads and forest of reeds,
the leader veering to the right, all but one, follow,
a goose nestled in the middle of the flock, lifting and thrashing its wings in the Air,
a flurry of feathers, as the rogue goose leaves the line,
to float amongst the lily-pads, silent and serene, again.
I grin at the dissenter as it drifts through the lily-pads, clambers onto the shore,
where it rests in a nest of grass, beneath a willow, watching the others
follow their leader,
steering them towards the dock,
where I like to sit and read and be.
I begin to walk, towards my special spot, sensing it's too late,
as I sweat beneath the scorch of Sun,
the veil of fleece that cloaks the Air, marauders of geese overtaking the dock, as the straight line crumples into chaos,
and the heap of geese clambers onto the dock,
the stragglers left to float adrift, without their leader, towards the middle of the Lake, where seagulls land to claim their domain.
I sigh as I stare at the dock, at the interlopers that have invaded my spot, or maybe I'm the one who trespasses across their terrain.
I slump on the grass and watch the geese waddle around the willow, pecking at clumps of moss, heading towards the rogue goose that slides back into the Lake,
refreshed from its solitude and rest.
I watch the lone goose float along the water, in the direction from which it came, sunlight brightening the flecks of white in its wings,
the leader, lost, in the gaggle of geese
spilling off the dock, to slip into water again, drifting towards the rogue goose,
the cluster straightening into a line.
A few stragglers left behind, as I approach the dock,
one of the geese, lifting and thrashing
its wings, in the Air, before it waddles into water again, to catch up with its flock.
I watch the procession from the dock,
'till all I see is a tail of white,
leaving a trail of light behind.

The Writers' Circle

A monthly feature of local creative writers' work

The day the art stood still

We walked along that Highland road,
All six of us, with young and old,
We blended in with local friends
Like brand new books between the ends.

We didn't know the luck we'd find
When we first planned this day in mind,
We wanted just a day of change,
Without a clue what was in range.

Then we saw a gorgeous scene,
Of bright white tents all glistening
Beneath the sun of this fine day,
The sun which helped us find our way,

The day the art stood still.

We took a cue from this bright sight
Decided this would be just right
For our four kids and for ourselves,
We might find treasures for our shelves!

We took a chance and paid the fare,
We joined all of those who care
About this town, its artists, and Its, oh so beautiful, piece of land.

The crafts and arts and beauty there
Were almost more than one could bear!
Paintings, glass and wood galore,
You couldn't ask for any more,

The day the art stood still.

We took it in, we took our time,
The beauty there was so sublime.
We played the drums, we felt the beat,
The rhythmic pulse was hot and sweet,

We watched the locals watch us back
Made new friends, we're keeping track!
The love this town has for its own,
And warmly treated us, unknown,

Was always clear throughout the day,
It seemed to be the common way.
It was the art that made this space,
Community would hold its place,

The day the art stood still.

Connecting Indigenous worldview with environmental sustainability

CHAD INGRAM
County Life Staff

In a world facing a major climate change crisis, looking through the lens of an Indigenous perspective may provide the key to re-establishing a relationship with the natural world, and therefore environmental sustainability.

Dr. Dan Longboat is a professor at Peterborough's Trent University, the director of the school's Indigenous environmental studies program and an acclaimed public speaker. In an event hosted by Environment Haliburton, Longboat will be giving a talk entitled "A Way of Life: Indigenous Knowledge to Sustain the World," at the Minden Hills Community Centre on the evening of Saturday, Aug. 10.

Longboat said he's excited to meet with members of the community, "to share with them some of the deeper understanding with an Indigenous worldview . . . with the necessity of having a relationship with the natural world."

His talk will entail looking at the limits of having only one perspective, and how that can limit the understanding of mankind's responsibility to the environment.

Longboat said that looking at all living things "as natural relatives, instead of natural resources," leads to a more empathetic relationship with the natural world, and humanity's moral obligation to protect it.

"Taking care of those life systems is a human responsibility," he said.

"We have never had to face the complexity we're facing right now," Longboat said, referring to phenomenon such as loss of biodiversity, habitat loss and declining water quality, all under the umbrella of climate change.

Backed by a change in mindset, individual actions toward environmental sustainability can have a profound impact.

"Those become exponential in their impacts on the natural world," said Longboat, who added he's hoping people will come to the talk with an open mind, and an open heart.

Longboat's presentation will commence at 7 p.m. on Saturday, Aug. 10 at the Minden Hills Community Centre. Tickets are $15 per person, and can purchased at the door or online at www.environmenthaliburton.org.

Dr. Dan Longboat, a professor with Trent University and the director of the school's Indigenous environmental studies program, is Environment Haliburton's summer speaker, and will give a talk at the Minden Hills Community Centre on Saturday, Aug. 10. /SUBMITTED

Doors Open (and improved)

JOHN JAMIESON
Special to County Life

As the Highland Grove genealogists sort through photographs of the past, occasionally a dog appears at the back of a scene. The researchers might forget the name of the dog, but it is usually met with "what a great dog" and, "there will never be another like our dog."

As has been heard often, "every dog has its day." But do they? Can you really point out a day on the calendar and say, "yep, that's the day our dog had its day."

Well, that day is coming. Pen a date on the back of your hand for Sept. 14 and 15 in the handsome community of Highland Grove.

Technically, Sept. 14 and 15 have been designated as Doors Open across Highlands East and many communities across Ontario. This is an opportunity to view locations of community pride and history. As most intellectuals, east of Wilberforce, know, the genealogy of approximately 50 of the early settlers in the area is stored in the log house museum, one of the first schools in the area, located next to the only bend in the road in Highland Grove. Also a good reason to visit.

The Historical Society is going to take pictures of all the dogs and their owners, if they like, and produce another hard covered one-off book to celebrate dogs. We will even take names and add it to the book. Imagine a Book of Dogs. And the book can have grandchildren with their pets. Twenty years from now those children will return to tell stories about their pet in September 2019. A historical coup and tear-jerker.

But, it has been brought to our attention that other animals also deserve an inclusion. Perhaps there are pets that don't have four feet. Come on out. Surprise us. We'll see you between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m.

The Historical Society is documenting the dogs of Highland Grove in a new hard-cover book. Come by during Doors Open - Sept. 14 and 15 - to the log house museum with pictures of your pets. /Photo submitted Guess Who?

I am an actor, screenwriter and director born in New York on July 6, 1946. I spent the early part of my acting career on the brink of homelessness. However, that all changed when I shot to fame in 1976 playing an Italian boxer from the streets.

A Highlands fling

More than 100 Highland dancers gathered in Head Lake Park on Saturday for the annual Haliburton Highland Games. To give the crowd a taste of some of Scotland's traditional dances, these girls did a demonstration on the grass during a break from competition. There were also heavy events and of course, lots of pipes and drums bands. There are more photos of the event, which attracted more than 2,500 people, on page 15.

Dysart closes doors on boathouse debate

SHERYL LOUCKS

Dysart et al councillors have decided that the issue of boat-houses will not be included in the recently-posted issue paper that outlines what the main areas of change could be for the new official plan.

On the county's website www.county.haliburton.on.ca, there are now three papers posted under the Dysart section pertaining to the development of a new official plan. These papers are about broad issues, roads and lake capacity.

He also suggested that lot sizes are often bigger now and the municipality may not have the same concerns as in the past.

Deputy-reeve Bill Davis says the size of the lots does not matter.

"Put a boathouse on a lake and you're shooting yourself in the foot," says Davis.

Reeve Murray Fearrey says back in 1967, cottagers asked council to not allow boathouses because they were unsightly.

"We put this out for public discussion and those in the con-

Grenville Martin's legacy remembered in Harcourt

SHERYL LOUCKS
Staff Reporter

The crisp letters spelling Grenville Martin Memorial Park on the new sign at the Harcourt ball diamond are just words, but his family says the spirit of their father and friend lives on in every crack of a bat hitting a ball and in the service of every volunteer at the community centre.

Grenville Martin built a Canadian logging hardwood mill empire based in Harcourt worth more than $7 million by the time he was 48 and passed away in a tragic plane crash in 1984.

He was an avid sportsman so purchased the land and ball diamond equipment such as the lights before he passed away. Valerie Smith says a previous sign with his name on it at the park was in shambles so an anonymous donor paid Andy Hillo to create a new sign for the park.

Smith was chosen by the Harcourt Community Centre board to organize a sign dedication ceremony. She tracked down many members of his family, none of whom live in Harcourt, for a dedication ceremony and presented last Saturday a collection of histori-
